There are several differences that separate the two groups, and because of this, one of these groups of athletes may be considered more suitable than the other. However, both are part of the general group of people who are physically active. This means that their goal is to improve their health skills and help them control various aspects of their health. While these three categories have a lot in common, there are some differences that can be important if a person is serious about sports. That's why it's important to study these differences and decide if each of these categories fits them
