My Thoughts on Love, Sex and Sexiness as it comes to Virtual Femdom, Bitches & Booty Menu Tag Archives: Society So, I've officially decided to get a second blog. I have started posting again but a bit longer at my tumblr blog, because of the limitations of tumblr, I will always allow my other readers access to more and to keep things on topic. I started this blog for research reasons but I've recently been wanting to find out how these stories I write about actually gets turned into book form, so I've got a few stories I'm planning to write and want to get your thoughts on them. Also, I was the victim of sexual harrasment in my teens, and I would like to briefly share how I was abused emotionally and physically from the age of 12-15. This is in no way a smear against the perpetrators of this violence against me, I was the sole cause of this situation, so I was responsible for making myself vulnerable. My perpetrators have never abused me emotionally or physically again, and I have always thanked them and respected their opinions, so I just wanted to share, as an older and wiser person. I should preface by saying that I'm not much for Valentine's Day. The stuffy romance is so uninteresting in my eyes, and so I've never been much of a big fan of it. However, I do like to surprise my boyfriend with a little gift on the 14th, as I have found that simple gifts are generally more appreciated than big expensive gifts. So my little gift to the man I spend most of my time with was to surprise him with a new outfit; a sexy kind of thing with a sports bra and a skirt. This gave me a bit of a buzz, being that my boyfriend doesn't generally do anything to the extreme in the way of clothing, but I still surprised him. The day went as it usually does; he woke up very happy and kissed me for breakfast. After breakfast, he went to work and I went to school, as I do each day. The purpose of this entry though is not to describe how I went to school, or what happened that day; I just wanted to share this little story. I was talking to my boyfriend on his phone last night, when I found out that he had two tickets to see Reba Mc

Q: Ambiguous F# Interfaces The F# Interfaces data type is similar to what COM allows for in that the Interface type has two types of fields: //-- type 'a Interface with member this.Member1 = A member this.Member2 = A //-- type 'a Interface IInterface> = inherit 'a Interface() member this.Member1 = B member this.Member2 = B //-- type 'a Interface IInterface2> = inherit 'a Interface() member this.Member1 = C member this.Member2 = C When used like so (Visual Studio 2010) interface IDoStuff interface IWasThing type DoStuff = interface IDoStuff type WasThing = interface IWasThing type ReturnIDoStuff = inherit DoStuff interface IWasThing type ReturnWasThing = inherit WasThing interface IWasThing let doStuff () = ReturnIDoStuff() doStuff () raises the Ambiguous match error. Is it possible to create an ambiguous interface that can both be handled by ReturnIDoStuff and ReturnWasThing? A: No, it is not possible. Interface is a generic type. To have two incompatible definitions for the same type requires a type parameter to be ambiguous. In your example, there is no type parameter, and it is impossible to make two incompatible definitions for the same type. You can do the kind of thing you're trying to do with a discriminated union. Suppose $-2*s = s - 5*k + 75$, $2*s + 35 = 5*k$. Let r be $(-21)/s*(-1 + (-6)/(-2))$. Let $t = 0 + 0$. Solve $r*b + t*b = 25$ for b. 5 Suppose $-2*j - 15 = -3*q$, $-3*j + 2 = 2*q -$
